HC 84-500
24 December 1984

--
MEMORANDUM FOR: Chairman, HUMINT Committee

VIA: C/CCS
VC/HC

SUBJECT: Survey Visit Results and Follow-up

1. Background/Purpose. Survey visits were made by C/HC and undersigned to selected institutions in California in an effort to stimulate detailed discussion and exchanges on the proposed Project for the Study of Contemporary Soviet Society, and to assess institutional capabilities and receptivity toward development of competitive requests for proposals (RFP) once funding is approved. During the period 10-13 December 1984, survey visits were made to the Slavic Center, University of California, Berkeley/Stanford University, San Francisco area, and the RAND/UCLA Center for the Study of Soviet International Behavior (CSSIB), Santa Monica/Los Angeles region. Visits were also made to the Naval Post Graduate School and the Defense Language Institute, Monterey to determine the status of ongoing Government institutional Soviet open-source S&T exploitation, area and language training programs.

2. Discussion Summary. Exploratory discussions show a high degree of enthusiasm for the program by the prospective host organizations visited. Detailed exchanges with a number of recognized scholars clearly indicate that minimal academic, as well as government attention is being given to the study and monitoring of societal trends and domestic pressures impacting on the Soviet leadership. Substantial and mutual academic support and interest for the Project clearly exists, particularly since the systematic and programmatic approach envisioned will revitalize an important field of study that has long suffered from neglect. Rand/UCLA (CSSIB) has significant advantages for location and direction of the Project.

3. Survey Visit Findings

a. [redacted]

25X1

[redacted] University of California, Berkeley, 11 December 1984 insights and 25X1 related follow-up actions:

(1) Major Discussion Points

- o Academic focus on internal trends and impact on Soviet leadership suffers from neglect.
- o Only a handful of qualified specialists are focusing on societal studies. Main academic effort is directed toward Soviet international security and policies.

CL BY SIGNER
DECL: OADR

CONFIDENTIAL

- o Crucial need for Govern/Academic partnership to revitalize the systematic study and monitoring of contemporary Soviet societal trends. (Harvard Project-1950s last major effort. [redacted] (Stanford) and other associated scholars have since been drawn to other fields). 25X1
- o Project envisioned would stimulate new and innovative efforts, and draw qualified scholars/students into field of study.
- o Wide-range of potentially significant open-source materials on popular culture, societal attitudes, values and perceptions are not being exploited, i.e., sociological journals, popular literature, media, etc.
- o Should not leave Project management/focus to emigre scholars alone. Instead, must team qualified emigres with methodology provided by Western scholars. Teaming concept would combine strengths of emigre insights with more rigorous Western scholarship base of evidence.
- o In-depth and systematic focus should be given to the following studies on contemporary Soviet society:
 - popular culture/social values and attitudes;
 - societal optimism/pessimism;
 - internal pressures on leadership;
 - social stability and elite perspectives;
 - "management" of multinational state; and
 - domestic links with foreign policy i.e., Polish events, Sino-Soviet, Afghanistan (vulnerability assessments) etc.
- o Need strong, well-qualified Project Director (substance/methodology) who is familiar with the status and relatively limited ongoing efforts in the area of contemporary Soviet society.
- o Need to consult/link Project with available methodology and data bases of recognized national and international scholars, i.e., [redacted] 25X1

[redacted]
CONFIDENTIAL

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

- o Project should include "Advisory Committee" consisting of recognized outside scholars representing multidisciplinary approaches. Advisory Committee members could substantially assist in providing realistic and sharpened focus to the Project, to include methodology and substance by conducting a "brainstorming" session at an early stage of the planning process.
- o Project core should consist of director, qualified emigres and Western scholars, as well as post-graduate students to assist in developing research base and providing long-term continuity.
- o Need for periodic direct exchanges between Project Director and Working Group consisting of Government consumers to enhance product focus and usefulness (policy relevance). This procedure would minimize current misunderstandings generated through the use of the National Council for Soviet and East European Research NCSEER) as an intermediary in the ongoing SIP.
- o Although initial multiyear funding (5 years) should be sponsored by the "Government as the catalyst for this pioneering effort", the envisioned Center should be encouraged to draw funds from other sources, i.e., endowments, foundations. A "Challenge Grant" may provide the means for longer term self-sustaining funding and Center continuity. (Note: The Berkeley/Stanford Slavic Center was the recipient of one million dollar Rockefeller Foundation Grant).
- o The lack of systematic academic focus on the study of contemporary Soviet society is a topic of concern that will be raised at the next Joint Committee on Soviet Studies "brainstorming" session to be held in New York City in January 1985. Soviet "literature and popular culture" is a topic that will also be given additional emphasis during follow-up Joint Committee meetings in April. C/HC might be invited to participate during the latter event.
- o The Berkeley/Stanford Slavic Center would enthusiastically welcome the opportunity to participate in the Project (NOTE: Center emphasis on multidisciplinary approach toward systematic monitoring of Soviet "popular culture").

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

(2) Follow-up Action

- o Continue review materials produced by recognized national and international scholars and determine appropriate Project links. (C/HC visits to related international, as well as national centers to identify scope of potential contributions and involvement).
- o Consider establishment of "Advisory Committee" of qualified outsiders to participate in "brainstorming" session and to provide sharpened methodological and substantive focus to the Project at an early stage after funding is approved.
- o Consider "Challenge Grant" funding concept for inclusion in the proposed competitive RFP to insure self-sustaining institutional funding and long-term Center continuity.
- o Coordinate with [redacted] to determine results of Joint Committee deliberations on Soviet Society in January, and consider participation in follow-on Standing Subcommittee meeting on Soviet Literature and Popular Culture, [redacted] to be held in New York, 12-13 April 85. 25X1
- o Consider [redacted] for role on Advisory Committee, and the Slavic Center as a potential resource base for the study of Soviet popular culture. 25X1

b. [redacted] Duke 25X1
University, NC highlighted the results of his collaborative work with [redacted] 25X1
[redacted] on the Soviet economy as part of the SIP: 25X1

- o Indicators show deteriorating quality of life in Soviet society is having distinct demographic impact i.e., decrease in male life expectancy, increase in suicide rate, and rise in alcoholism.
- o Leadership recognizes problem, but efforts to resolve dilemma have proven ineffectual (problems are largely systemic). Tax on spirits provide 12-15 % of national revenue. Government attempts to prohibit or limit sales would result in shifting the production and sales of alcohol to the second economy and would have minimal impact.

CONFIDENTIAL

- o Prefers the use of qualified emigres to conduct surveys.
(Improved control of bias, overstatement, and paranoia when qualified emigres conduct interviews)
- o Detailed research [redacted] and interviews of emigres indicate that official statistics understate sales in private urban markets by a factor of seven. Conversely, production of meat and milk products by state enterprises is grossly overstated. Approximately 50% of the gasoline for private sale and use is pilfered from the State .

25X1

c. [redacted] Stanford University underscored the following points:

25X1

- o Soviet Society is the "single most neglected area of Soviet studies". With exception of Harvard Project, this task has virtually been ignored. Need for systematic focus on topic is clear.
- o Research on USSR social trends and pathologies, as well as their impact on the Soviet leadership is both timely and important. No major program exists in the country to adequately study societal trends, and a mass of available open-source material is not being exploited. Believes that [redacted] concerns are fully justified.
- o Does not see Harvard to be a serious competitor as a prospective host for the Project, particularly since most of the talent formerly associated with the initial effort in the 50s have already left. (No Harvard based Ph.D. training in this area being conducted. Other universities, now have more capability).
- o While Columbia University has some impressive scholars i.e., [redacted] there is minimal guidance or interaction with a talented student body. This factor undermines a potentially useful foundation of research.
- o While competitive with the Berkeley/Stanford program, believes the Rand/UCLA Soviet studies program is weak in assessment of Soviet media.
- o Main challenge is to systematically focus on social dynamics and the impact on the Soviet leadership. There is a clear need to encourage the interest and training of a younger generation of scholars toward this important field of research.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

- o Believes that additional effort must be also made to exploit the emigre insights on the topic. At the same time, advises a rigorous methodological approach to minimize the tendency toward "wishful thinking". Agrees that teaming concept offers the most promise in more accurately assessing the degree and scope of social discontent in the USSR, particularly the impact on the Soviet leadership.

d. [redacted] Stanford University, author, and former OSS analyst with an extensive background in developing methodologies to assess cross-cultural perceptions underscored his support for the goals of the Project:

- o The author of Managing The US-Soviet Rivalry detailed his experiences and current efforts to assess cross-cultural perceptions, particularly his work on Soviet leadership signalling and crisis management.
- o Stressed the need for a systematic monitoring effort to better understand domestic concerns and the constraints on the Soviet leadership, and emphasized the need to minimize our own cultural misperceptions.
- o Methodological approach should focus on the Soviet media to obtain better understanding of attitudes, values, and cultural perspectives. The use of Western models and assumptions in describing Soviet behavior will continue to perpetuate inaccurate analytical assumptions.
- o Encourages continued government/academic partnership in pursuing Project and lauded the efforts of [redacted] Rand/UCLA Center as a prime example of successful collaboration in meeting this need.

25X1

e. Visits to Naval Postgraduate School (NPS), and the Defense Language School (DLI), Monterey, 12 December 1984.

(1) Discussion Summary

o [redacted]

25X1

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

-Need to stimulate greater academic interest in Soviet S&T;

-Need to exploit Soviet S&T holdings at international libraries, (i.e., Hanover, Dr Weinberg taking follow-up action);

-Appreciate IC Steering Group S&T efforts to enhance CIRC and translation support for both R&D and Intelligence Communities;

-Would use NHCPs to identify useful topics for student research;

-Support reversal of current graduate training procedures, e.g., NPS/Language. Emphasizes research advantage if language conducted before area studies training;

-Shortage of TDY funds to enable faculty research projects in social science areas (Prof Weinberg stated that he could help resolve this problem); and

-Requests assist in cutting thru bureaucratic tape to enable a highly qualified NPS faculty member [redacted] to conduct academic research

25X1

(2) Follow-up Action

- o Coordinate with Navy HC Backup Member for transmittal and use of NHCPs for assistance in topic research by NPS graduate students.
- o HUMINT Committee Soviet S&T Steering Group Executive Secretary maintain links with NCIST to determine status and progress.

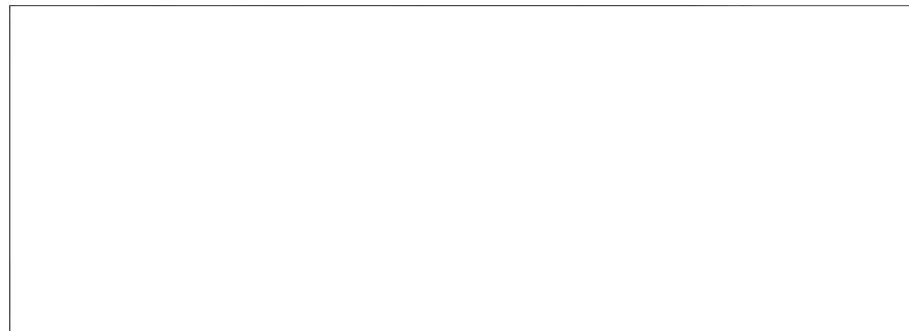

25X1

25X1

- o To enhance understanding of Soviet society and culture, best students and officer classes are given intensive language training in Russian Cultural House.
- o DLI plans call for construction of segregated Russian language area (village) with all signs in Russian to encourage more intensive use.
- o COL Stovall, CMDT US Army Russian Institute, Garmisch has coordinated with DLI to insure increase in language standards for officer trainees.
- o Representatives raised the problem of obtaining current Russian language tapes for use in training. Numerous efforts to resolve this problem over the past few years have not been successful.

25X1

(4) Follow-up Action

- o Assist DLI in efforts to obtain current language tapes for training.
- o Determine means to encourage support and funding for the continuity of [] ASEEPL project, and consider for role in Soviet Society Project.

f. Subsequent discussions with [redacted] Rand/UCLA
Center for the Study of Soviet International Behavior (CSSIB)
[redacted] State, and other scholars [redacted] at Rand, Santa Monica, 13 December 1984 highlighted:

25X1

- o The former NIO, USSR fully aware of the Community's efforts to enhance understanding of political and social discontent in USSR, and the relatively limited academic focus on the topic.
- o Since 40s, Rand traditionally in the forefront in providing policy relevant scholarship.
- o Significant experience in interviewing emigres (Rand data base contains over 800 emigre contributors, and over 350 transcribed taped interviews). Fully supportive of teaming emigres/Western scholars to alter conventional wisdom in studies.
- o Substantial shift in Soviet-oriented scholarship to the West Coast. Rand has largest number of full-time Sovietologists-12, and number will grow as a result of consortium with UCLA (currently 22). See 1985-86 CSSIB program at attachment 1, 1984 CSSIB Calendar at attachment 2, and Conference on US Soviet Relations: The Next Phase, at attachment 3).
- o Declining national focus on internal Soviet dynamics since Harvard project in 50s resulted from relatively limited research funding, particularly in contrast to funding for military and foreign policies (limited constituency).
- o Clear need to upgrade national on Soviet society is reason why Rand is negotiating with [redacted] for full-time position in February 1985. (NOTE: consensus of Working Group members and various academics that [redacted] is best qualified candidate to serve as Project Director. See VITA at attachment 4)
- o Rand "clipping center", computerized index capabilities and library infrastructure are primarily oriented toward effective research support.
- o Extensive Soviet open-source holdings are complemented by broad access to all-source classified intelligence data base to support research needs of Intelligence and policy consumers.

CONFIDENTIAL

- o Rand would prefer direct Intelligence Community Staff funding and relationship with consumers and would agree to serve as the prime research center and subcontracting agent for the Project, to include collaboration with qualified emigres. (In contrast, academic community not comfortable with IC direct funding role and prefers State funding).
- o Rand scholars maintain professional research exchange with a number of international institutes and Soviet emigre scholars i.e., Israeli academics/emigres (circumvent bureaucratic obstacles).
- o [redacted] underscored his desire to direct the Project, during a period when the Soviet leadership is in the process of diagnosing societal dilemmas. Party elites are now in the throes of assessing implications and tradeoffs. Unfortunately, day to day priorities in government, and precious few academics attentive to this area of study remains a problem. [redacted] believes that the network of scholars envisioned by the Project is the most effective way to proceed. (The need to reestablish and legitimize sociological studies on the USSR is most timely. We have yet to establish the fundamental base lines to measure changes and trends in Soviet society). 25X1 25X1
- o [redacted] emphasized that there are few sociologists comparable to Harvard in the 50s to train a new generation of scholars. Goal of Rand/UCLA CSSIB is to add course work to help meet this need. (NOTE: the Rockefeller Foundation has awarded $500,000 to CSSIB to support its innovative Soviet studies program). 25X1

(2) Follow-up Action.

- o The Rand/UCLA program appears to have significant advantages for the management and direction of the Project. In contrast to other academic institutions, visited, advantages include:
 - Traditional focus on policy relevant studies, and largest national base of Soviet area scholars;
 - Rand/UCLA Center Director [redacted] thoroughly familiar with mutual government/academic objectives and capabilities; 25X1 parts a program for a limited number of visiting scholars drawn from among senior U.S. or foreign scholars, faculty members of smaller U.S. colleges and universities, and postdoctoral students.

PUBLIC EDUCATION

The Center is committed to disseminating its research findings to the widest possible audience. It uses research publications, seminars and conferences to inform both the public and professional communities, including legislators, business executives, and the news media, about issues relating to the Soviet Union. It also attempts to reach the educational community at the under graduate and secondary school levels as well as the graduate level. The Center plans to distribute a semi-annual newsletter detailing its activities and advertising its public education functions.

THE RAND/UCLA CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF SOVIET INTERNATIONAL BEHAVIOR

In October 1963 The Rand Corporation and the University of California at Los Angeles established a new joint Center for the Study of Soviet International Behavior. With major grant assistance from the Rockefeller Foundation, the Rand/UCLA Center supports a broad program of analytic and policy relevant research in Soviet international behavior, provides training leading to a doctoral degree at UCLA or The Rand Graduate Institute, and disseminates its research findings to the public.

The Center's interdisciplinary program in Soviet International behavior is designed to help alleviate the national shortage of specialists in Soviet foreign and military policy and to strengthen advanced research in this field. The joint program represents a major innovation in the area of Soviet studies, combining Rand's outstanding research capabilities in Soviet foreign and military policy with the broad and well-established infrastructure in Russian and East European graduate training at one of the nation's leading universities. Together, Rand and UCLA have more than twenty faculty and research staff members who are specialists in Soviet International behavior, a concentration of expertise unmatched at any nongovernmental center.

GRADUATE TRAINING

The Center supports a number of graduate fellows in a three-year program tailored to a Ph.D. with a concentration in Soviet International behavior. The curriculum combines three elements: graduate courses in the particular discipline; core graduate courses in Soviet studies; and unique on-the-job training in research on the Soviet Union, under the supervision of Rand staff members. CSSIB students enroll at either UCLA or the Rand Graduate Institute (RGI), depending upon their major field, and take core courses at both institutes. Participating UCLA departments are economics, history, and political science. The RGI offers a doctorate in policy analysis.

Participants in the CSSIB program are expected to satisfy the normal degree requirements of their parent institutions (i.e., UCLA or RGI). In addition they must successfully complete the following ten quarter courses:

- U.S.-Soviet relations
- Soviet military thought and policy
- Soviet policy toward selected regions
- the Soviet economy and Soviet international economic behavior
- Soviet policymaking (economic, political, military)*
- domestic foundations of Soviet foreign policy
- policy analysis and methodology workshop (2 quarters)*
- research seminar, involving use of Russian language sources (2 quarters)

The starred courses (*) will be offered at the RGI; the remaining courses at UCLA. The UCLA campus and the RGI are in close (15 minute) proximity.

ADMISSIONS

Participants in the RAND/UCLA Soviet International Behavior program must satisfy the graduate admission requirements set by the relevant department at UCLA or by the RGI. It is strongly preferred that CSSIB applicants should possess, in addition to the normal admissions requirements of the sponsoring institution:

- reading proficiency in Russian
- knowledge of Soviet economics, history, and politics at the undergraduate level

Otherwise qualified applicants with inadequate preparation in the Russian language will be required to complete an intensive language course at UCLA in the summer preceding entry to the CSSIB program.

FELLOWSHIP SUPPORT

The CSSIB offers up to five fellowships annually to selected students in doctoral programs at UCLA and the Rand Graduate Institute who elect to specialize in Soviet International behavior. These fellowships, renewable annually, cover tuition and provide a $10,000 annual stipend. Fellowship awards are contingent on admission to the degree program at either institution. Receipt of a Center fellowship, however, is not a condition for admission to the CSSIB program.

First and second year fellows are required to undertake on-the-job training in a research project and can expect to receive approximately $4,000 a year for the equivalent of three months of full-time research during the academic year and summer. Third year fellows working on a dissertation will be covered by a combination of Center and Rand Corporation contract funds and can expect to receive an average of $15,000 for the year.

FACULTY AND RESEARCH STAFF

The CSSIB draws upon a staff at Rand and UCLA with extensive academic and government experience in the field of Soviet International behavior. Staff members offer courses at each other's institutions and conduct research across a broad range of topics bearing on Soviet International behavior. Rand and UCLA specialists in Soviet affairs include:

Arthur Alexander Economics Dept., Rand; Soviet military economics

Alexander Alexiev Political Science Dept., Rand; Soviet foreign policy and East European politics

Jeremy Azrael Political Science Dept., Rand (beginning January 1965); Soviet politics and foreign policy

Kendall Bailey History Dept., UCLA; Soviet history

Abraham Becker Economics Dept., Rand; Soviet economics and foreign economic relations

David Cattell Political Science Dept., UCLA; Soviet politics and foreign policy

Keith Crane Economics Dept., Rand; Soviet and East European economics

Frank Fukuyama Political Science Dept., Rand; Soviet foreign and military policy

Harry Gelman Political Science Dept., Rand; Soviet politics and foreign policy

Reed Gottemoeller Political Science Dept., Rand; Soviet military policy

Arnold Herrelitz Political Science Dept., Rand; Soviet politics, foreign and military policy

A. Ross Johnson Political Science Dept., Rand; East European politics and Soviet-East European relations

Simon Kaseel Political Science Dept., Rand; Soviet science and technology policy

Roman Kellnerowicz Political Science Dept., UCLA; Soviet politics, foreign and military policy

Andrzej Karbasinski Political Science Dept., UCLA; East-European politics and Soviet-East European relations

Benjamin Lambeth Political Science Dept., Rand; Soviet military policy

Nathan Leites Economics Dept., Rand; Soviet political foreign and military policy

George Murphy Economics Dept., UCLA; Soviet economics

Nancy Neidal Economics Dept., UCLA; Soviet economics

William Potter Political Science Dept., UCLA; Soviet foreign and military policy

Hans Riegel History Dept., UCLA; Soviet history

Edward Warner Political Science Dept., Rand; Soviet foreign and military policy

ADVANCED RESEARCH

The Center's research program builds upon the strong foundations of Soviet research at Rand and UCLA. In its research effort, CSSIB seeks a balance between (1) research to enlarge the broad base of academic knowledge that supports the study of Soviet International behavior and (2) research to address directly those aspects of Soviet behavior most critically related to the conduct of US foreign defense, and arms control policies.

The Center focuses on issues that cut across disciplines—economics, religion and technology, military affairs, politics, and international relations. Research interests of particular concern to CSSIB include:

- Military and arms control issues
- East-West economic relations
- Soviet relations with Eastern Europe
- Soviet relations with the Third World
- Domestic determinants of Soviet international behavior

The Center sponsors conferences and seminars to further its research objectives. The products of Center-supported research are published as Center papers, monographs, and books.

In addition to expanding the scope of research on Soviet International behavior conducted by the Rand research staff and UCLA faculty, the Center also sup-
